EGGLESTON, VA., August 14.—The week came in with every available, and some seemingly unavailable, space filled. Saturday evening brought in such a crowd that not only was every room and bed filled, but some guests even had to extend the hospitality of their rooms for cots for friends who came unexpectedly. But the latchstring is always hanging out at Eggleston, and the roof tree managed to cover all who came. A right jolly week it was with reunions between those who had met before either here or elsewhere, and a royal welcome for the newcomers, for there are no "strangers within our gates" at Eggleston. There are too many Virgingleston. The old Dominion more manifest than here and now.
